NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE SEVERE WEATHER SPOTTER TRAINING

April 29, 2015 | 9:00 - Noon
Denver Federal Center | Lakewood CO

FREE | ONLINE REGISTRATION REQUIRED <https://colorado.feb.gov/register/?ee=274>
TRAINER | Bob Glancy, Warning Coordination Meteorologist, National Weather Service

The National Weather Service (NWS) in Boulder has tools to see storms including Doppler radar, satellite images, and rain gauges. Spotters report hail size, rainfall rates, the extent of flooding, funnel clouds and tornadoes, snowfall, peak wind gusts and wind damage, etc. Spotters provide ground truth and help the NWS put out accurate warnings and forecasts. A trained spotter can help their business or community by providing the early notification of a dangerous weather situation. Spotter training keeps the spotter and family safer when severe weather threatens.

TRAINING TOPICS:

- ♦ Severe weather (hail, tornadoes, damaging winds, flash flooding).
- ♦ Severe weather safety.
- ♦ National Weather Service watches, warnings, and the flow of information before and during severe weather.
- ♦ How warnings are issued and the importance of spotter information in the warning process.
- ♦ Types of thunderstorms and how their structure varies.
- ♦ What to look for in a rotating storm.
- ♦ Types of tornadoes and how they develop (supercell and non supercell)
- ♦ Cloud features and what they indicate from different distances and locations from the storm.
- ♦ What makes Colorado special? We include local information on the role topography plays in contributing to the severe weather and flooding in northeast Colorado.
- ♦ Anyone who signs up becomes part of the Colorado All-Season Spotter Team (CAST). CAST spotters receive their own spotter identification number and instructions on what to report and how to report it to the National Weather Service.
